NEWSLETTER

July 2019

Welcome to our Ticket to Work newsletter for July - introducing a fresh new look and bringing you more exciting content!

In this edition:

- We present the findings from our Ticket to Work outcomes evaluation.
- We let you know about our free webinar series. The first session will explore our recent evaluation, and the second will focus on customised employment.
- We share our first podcast! Just scroll down to listen.

Ticket to Work Post-school outcomes final report released

Ticket to Work prepares high school students with disability for life after school. An independent evaluation found that Ticket to Work participants have higher labour market participation, school completion, post-school studying, social participation and independence compared to other young people with similar disability. Our first podcast! Life after school for young people with disability

In our very first podcast episode, we share findings from our research about what happens when you give young people with disability opportunities at school to experience work, career development and to see themselves as workers. We discuss economic and social benefits for the individual, their families and society. Listen here!

Webinar: Effective school-to-work transition - Learnings from Ticket to Work

Join us in this webinar as we explore a recent independent evaluation we commissioned, which looked at whether connecting students with disability with the 'world of work' before they leave school (using a network approach) creates better economic and social outcomes post-school.
