

What schools have said about Ticket to Work

Ticket to Work has successfully broken down barriers with employers and parents concerned about the employment of students with disability and the success of Ticket to Work is generating a lot of community interest.

We are so excited that Ticket to Work is now national because growing it will only make things better for kids with a disability.

Through Ticket to Work we are introducing the agencies to the students while they are at school. They are key agencies that the students can access post-school which to me is a huge advantage.

Ticket to Work has been great in a way I did not expect, the Grade 7 students want to do the jobs the older students are doing in their school based traineeship, because they heard about them working and know they get paid for it so they are a great role model for our students.

Ticket to Work has really amazed us!

Without this network I would find it extremely difficult to assist our students in finding work experience at all.

Ongoing Ticket to Work is needed, as without this I would really be at loose ends in supporting our students with disabilities.

As a result of the support from the group and the meetings I have developed meaningful working relationships with NDIS partners, employment consultants and other school representatives which in turn has led to improved outcomes for my higher needs students.

Has been positive for our region. It is gaining further momentum.

From a school perspective we can't do it on our own and for many years we did try to, but there is no safety net for students when they leave. This sort of partnership puts a safety net around the student and enables them to be more successful people outside of the school environment have greater skills in the work area than I do.
